

22nd ANNUAL MEDICAL STAFF SYMPOSIUM

JUNE 21-23, 2019

KEEPING the FLAME ALIVE

Beaumont

KEEPING the FLAME ALIVE

As idealistic young adults, we looked to medicine as an opportunity to make a mark in the world. What could be nobler than healing those suffering from illness? We were determined to get the best possible education regardless of working conditions or time spent so as to best prepare to help those in need. What a thrill when we finally got to wear a white coat! Who can forget marching across the stage to receive our diploma as our family and friends looked on, cheering with immense pride. Then on to residency and fellowship. The demands were unrelenting, but the fire within was inextinguishable. Upon the completion of training, we began our careers full of enthusiasm, ready to take on the most difficult challenges. And so we did, often with great success.

Unfortunately, for many the flame is now flickering amidst the torrential winds of change. Technology designed to make it easier to practice excellent medicine has diverted our attention from the relationships with our patients. Required paperwork abounds and efficiency rules the day. The humanity that led us to our cherished profession is under siege and we struggle to keep compassion at the forefront of our daily existence.

So what does this have to do with the Medical Staff Symposium? Every year, the answer becomes evident to those who attend. Sitting with and learning from our colleagues in a relaxed environment takes us back to our very roots (sans the stress). The chance to share our vast experiences with each other rekindles the collegiality that forms the backbone of our profession. Interacting with each other as everyday people, not white coats with abundant knowledge, provides the context we need to work more harmoniously and effectively when we return home. It would be remiss not to mention the laughter of the children as they participate in organized events. How better to light up our lives? Keeping the flame alive, that is what the Medical Staff Symposium is all about.

Hope to see you there.

How better to light up our lives? Keeping the flame alive, that is what the Medical Staff Symposium is all about.
